

ABSTRACT

A laser pulse communication system that orients a polarization analyzer to a state determined based on received laser pulses. The oriented state of the polarization analyzer allows a transceiver to obtain a replica of the transmitted laser pulses that are unbroadened by multiple reflections caused by inter-transceiver media. The obtained replica, therefore, has an enhanced signal to noise ratio.

Approved for release